Help your child maintain a love of learning all summer long

Even if your child complains about school, chances are he likes learning. Here are some ways to maintain your child's interest in learning all summer long:

- ◆ Make time to talk. Studies have shown that kids whose families have frequent discussions about many subjects tend to have higher IQs.
- ◆ Build on your child's interests. For example, if your child loves playing the guitar, read books about the instrument, go to a free concert, or encourage him to write to a famous guitarist.
- ◆ Try a new activity you can do with your child, such as a sport. Choose something he's excited about. Show how interested you are in learning and improving—and that you never give up.
- ◆ Become tourists in your own town. Try to see your town through fresh eyes. Check out an exhibit at a local museum or library. Explore a different trail at a local park.
- ◆ Set an example by learning more about the things you love. If you enjoy cooking, take a cooking class, check out a cookbook at the library or try a new recipe. Invite your child to help.

Please send in Box Tops for Education for this year's final submission!!

And, don't forget to save them over the summer! We earn 10¢ for every Box Top we send in 😊 congratulations
